Heavy Killing Reported

by SYDNEY H. SCHINDLER

Special to The New York Times

NEW DELHI, March 29—(AP) Its battle to put down the independence movement in East Pakistan, the Pakistani army, has reported widespread killings of civilians, according to reports reaching here today from unimpeachable foreign diplomatic sources in Dacca.

These reports were confirmed to Dacca, a city of 1,500,000 people, and all the reports were confirmed to events up to the Pakistani army, without warning, attacked civilian population centers in an effort to crush the province's nonviolent movement for autonomy. The army units—all West Pakistani troops—opened fire with artillery, rockets and machine guns.

Since then, a resistance effort has been launched, with East Pakistan police and a militia called the East Pakistan Rifles fighting the army with the aid of civilians armed with knives, sticks and homemade guns.

The current crisis goes back to a decision by President Agha Mohammad Yahya Khan to postpone the meeting of the National Assembly that was to have begun to draft a constitution ending military rule.

That meeting would have been dominated by East Pakistani principal party, the Awami League of Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, which had won a clear majority in elections in December with its demands for regional autonomy.

The decision to postpone the session touched off protest demonstrations, strikes and rioting in East Pakistan, and the army was reported to have killed scores of Bengalis.

The Awami League gradually took control in East Pakistan.

Negotiations were then begun involving the President, Sheikh Mujib Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, the dominant political leader of West Pakistan. Despite public reports of progress as late as last Tuesday, authoritative sources now say that West Pakistani interests had decided from the start not to yield their hold on East Pakistan.

Saturday night, the army attack began on Thursday night.

The initial version of the report relayed to New Delhi from these sources:

"The Tanti Bazaar and Sanhar Bazaar areas of Dacca were abandoned by more than 10,000 people, who were surrounded by the army. Houses were set on fire and people were being butchered. Even residents fleeing the area have not been spared."

Another report from other highly reliable foreign diplomatic sources in Dacca said the office of Ittefaq, a Bengali-language newspaper, was burned with 40 persons inside.

There have been reports from the interior telling of killings of civilians, some later than Saturday, but these reports do not come from diplomatic sources and are impossible to evaluate.

Diplomatic sources in Dacca report they have received what they consider reliable reports from the interior that heavy fighting is going on in some areas between the army and civilian resistance forces, with the army strafing from the air and using tanks and heavy artillery on the ground.

The overall official toll is not known. The Clandestine Radio of the resistance movement said that 300,000 East Pakistanis were killed by West Pakistan troops in the first 24 hours of the army's attack.

Widespread conflicting reports about who is winning in East Pakistan continue to feed the atmosphere of New Delhi. Because of a lack of all normal news contacts and communications from East Pakistan, it is impossible to tell from these unverifiable reports whether the Pakistani Army is in control and the province relatively calm, as it insists, or whether the civilian resistance has made the army's position desolate, as the resistance has said in some of its clandestine broadcasts.

The fighting in East Pakistan began last Thursday night when