Pakistan:

'All Part Of a Game'—A Grim and Deadly One

NEW DELHI—All of a sudden, suddenly another一步，West Pakistan. This was the Alliance was announced for the first time by the Pakistan military. The announced a new Foreign Diplomatic

A week ago, Pakistan's Foreign Minister, Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, said that the military junta had decided to negotiate a truce with India. This announcement was made after three days of intense-secret talks between the two countries.

The Pakistan junta has thus far refused to comment on this announcement or on the reasons for it. However, it is generally believed that the decision to negotiate a truce was taken in order to avoid further loss of life and property, and to improve the chances of a settlement of the Indo-Pakistan conflict.

The India-Pakistan conflict began in December 1971, when India invaded West Pakistan in response to a military coup in East Pakistan. The conflict has caused widespread destruction and displacement of people.

The Indian government has been criticized for its handling of the conflict, with many accusing it of using excessive force.

On the other hand, Pakistan has been ruled by a military junta since 1971, and has been known for its human rights violations and the suppression of political dissent.

It is hoped that a truce agreement will be reached soon, allowing both countries to focus on rebuilding and restoring peace.

Published: April 4, 1971
Copyright © The New York Times